

THE EVENING STAR.
WASHINGTON.
TUESDAY, November 8, 1892.
CROSBY & NOTES. Editor.

THE EVENING STAR has a regular and constant circulation in Washington three times larger than that of any other paper in the city. As a local NEWS paper and Advertising Medium it has no competitor.

This is election day. The day when millions of men will shout themselves hoarse for the candidate who will be defeated and when other millions will temporarily lose their voices through efforts to glorify the victor and his cause when the hopes of one party, perhaps two, will be crushed for four years. All over the great geographical area of the United States there is noise and enthusiasm and cheering. In the cities the clamor of the multitudes has drowned the hum of commercial industry in the country there is forgetfulness as to crops and indifference to all matters that are non-political. Everywhere except in this city there is more or less of disturbance, here only there is absolute calm. It may be that the silence will be fractured even in Washington before midnight, but the chances are that nothing more vital will be broken.

For the political parties there is nothing more to do than await the return. Each, according to its supporters, has conducted a brilliant and magnificent campaign, has shaken the strongholds of corruption and foulness to their foundations, has assailed every position held by the frightened enemy, has found encouragement in every act of its opponents, and is now confident of the victory that must come to the only party that has for its object the purification of the ballot, the upholding of American methods, the enlargement of American institutions and increased prosperity for the entire nation.

In recent presidential contests the public has never had to watch closely more than two or three doubtful states, and on the result in those states the popular vote was so widely scattered but today the dubiousness is so widely scattered as to make probable a general attack of mental strabismus. These uncertain spots have all been indicated by THE STAR's special correspondents, and when the period of doubt has given place to the first moment of certainty the same faithful chroniclers will, through the same medium, spread abroad the truth, and a great crowd will this evening read the news as it is displayed in front of THE STAR's office.

Since the coming of civil service reform the inhabitants of the city view with little apprehension the coming of election day and its inevitable successor—the fourth day of the March following. There is no good reason why any Washingtonian should permit himself to be unduly excited, and the probabilities are that there will be an entire absence of anything more harmful than the noise without which true partisanship seems to be as nothing.

There will be no real reason for national grief, no matter which organization comes out on top. Whatever party wins the greatest republic in all history will continue to do business at the old stand, and the prosperity which comes of intelligent industry will be ours to a greater degree than ever. Even the political party which could not more than momentarily disturb the national equilibrium.

It is to be hoped that one of the great parties will get a majority of the electoral votes, and that the selection of a President will not be left to a handful of Weaver electors or to a House of Representatives, concerning the constitutionality of whose composition without the additional Representatives allotted under the recent census serious question has been raised. Weaver is conceded the Nevada electors (3) and has a good chance to win Colorado (4), Nebraska (8), four in Minnesota and one in Oregon. Other western votes are claimed for him with more or less confidence. A result of the balloting, which would give him the balance of power in the electoral college, would be no more extraordinary and unexpected than a clear victory for Harrison or Cleveland. The failure of Harrison to secure a majority of the electoral votes would at first glance seem to mean the certain victory of Cleveland by the vote of the House of Representatives. But it has been intimated by some of the third party leaders that some of the Weaver electors would be thrown for Harrison if necessary to defeat Cleveland. The failure of either Cleveland or Harrison to get a clear majority of the electors voted for today would, therefore, result in a competitive scramble between republicans and democrats for the Weaver electors, in which previous party affiliations, promises of action on the census question and perhaps superior pecuniary temptations addressed to individuals might decide the votes of those electors. Or if they held to Weaver indifferent as to whether or not their course would elect Cleveland, the House, alleged to be unconstitutional in its make up, would be made the arbiter. Let us hope that one candidate will have a clear majority. We want no repetition in any shape of our experiences of 1876.

Fifteen republican registered voters at the New Haven hospital are quarantined, it is said, on account of the smallpox scare, and if the nutmeg case is close enough for their votes to decide the result there may be a chance for another contested election case exceeding in interest the last state election there.

Bismarck has again heated the waters of political controversy in Germany. When the ex-chancellor fails to perform this task it may be reckoned an off day in the fatherland. He enjoys it. Perhaps the Kaiser does not.

The cholera epidemic proceedings before and after the postponed its promised visit until after election. Both the epidemics evidently recognizing a big institution when they see it.

Tom Watson is reported as threatening to burn his town down. The firing of a town as the result of the firing of a Congressman is an exceedingly bad precedent to establish.

The world will know in the morning, perhaps tonight, the value of Mr. Cleveland's recent remark that Mr. Winney is "the greatest politician of the country."

So far as can be judged from a Washington stand-point, Uncle Jerry Bush, as director of the weather, has seen the duty of a staunch republican and done it.

It will be about all the telegraph wires can do to carry the news tonight. Since expressions of feeling would in some cases probably burn them out.

THE STAR will conduct a campaign of education on its own account with the aid of a stereoscopic and an extensive and reliable election news service.

Bakerloo, galloos, newspapers, street cars, less, the crescent city of New Orleans feels herself on the wave pending the strike.

The local politicians have done nobly all that they could do. Today their part is the leading heavy standing-around.

The weather prophet says that it is to be a cold day in the northwest. For Harrison or for Cleveland?

The quietness of the campaign makes the election excitement all the more effective by contrast.

The election has for a time superseded even the allurements of policy.

The curtain falls at last on the spectacular day performance.

Homestead will now have an opportunity to retire from politics.

OF
FOR FALL AND WINTER OF 92-93.

This season marks the high tide of "Dress Emulation" popularity, and if feminine interest does not culminate tomorrow in this elaborate display it is not apt to do so later. The prevailing fashion demands that every well-dressed lady have more or less embellishment to her gown. In all that is right and proper we are prepared to help you meet that demand. We want direct to PARIS, where these dainty, exquisite things are made, carefully selected themselves, and now submit them to you for just what they are—the acme of refinement, style and beauty—Parisian to the last thread, showing an originality, a delicacy characteristic of the French. They have quality, too. We cannot print their richness. Hundreds of novelties, the shades and styles of which are not only new, but have an unusual individuality and bear the marks of exclusiveness. Altogether they form a collection at once extensive, varied, unique. This partial list will give you an inkling of the incomparable assortment:
